

South East Local Land Services

Recovering our Regions - Free baits for rabbit control

Act now and join the campaign! You can help control pest rabbits and help your community, our farmers and the environment.

For a limited time only, as part of our pest management programs South East Local Land Services (LLS) is offering landholders in the Queanbeyan-Palerang region free supply of rabbit baits using calicivirus.

LLS is targeting rabbits throughout the Summer/Autumn seasons as part of a coordinated pest animal control program, aimed at significantly reducing rabbit populations across the Queanbeyan-Palerang region using Rabbit Haemorrhagic Disease Virus (RHDV), more commonly known as calicivirus.

Following on from the recent bushfires and drought, this program gives landholders the opportunity to review their strategies and implement a coordinated program for controlling rabbits. Rabbits compete with grazing stock for food, contribute to soil erosion, damage crops and destabilise the land. Less than one rabbit per football field sized paddock is enough to stop the growth of some native species and negatively affect biodiversity.

Pest animal management requires commitment and a collaborative approach. Group control programs have proven to reduce feral populations over broad areas with more sustainable outcomes. By joining the campaign, you will be able to participate in strategic control program allowing you to work with your neighbours and local networks achieving better results for you, your community, our farmers and the environment.

What are the benefits –

- Free carrot for free feeding/baiting
- Free RHDV (Calicivirus)
- Up to date support and information from Local Land Services staff to coordinate training, baiting and other essential services required to enable the program
- Helping your community, farmers and the environment by controlling rabbits in your area.
